

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., OCTOBER 1894.

TO THE MEDICAL PROFESSION :

The undersigned hereby respectfully announces, that he has equipped and opened a PRIVATE LYING-IN HOSPITAL. The usefulness and urgent need of such an institution, which affords to unfortunate women refuge, secrecy and safety in confinement, and which assures to those women having serious complications during labor the advantages of special skill and appointments, need no argument in this place. The populous State of Indiana, having no such institution, demands it, the great population of its Capital City furthers the aim of secrecy, and its easy accessibility both make it a natural and desirable location. The Hospital is situated in a quiet residential part of the city. Its equipment meets all modern demands for safety and comfort. Kind, skilled and discreet nurses are in attendance. The previous experience of the undersigned as resident physician in the Lying-in Clinic and Children-Hospital in Zuerich, and the Citizens, Hospital in Basel (Switzerland) has especially prepared him for this undertaking.
